KCAC IS HOST TO PILATUS OWNERS FROM ACROSS THE COUNTRY

Olathe, KS (April 13, 2005) – Kansas City Aviation Center (KCAC), located at Johnson County Executive Airport, will host members of the Pilatus Owners and Pilots Association (POPA) during a three-day convention in Kansas City. Nearly 50 Pilatus PC-12s are expected to arrive at KCAC for the 9th Annual Convention on Wednesday, April 20, 2005.

POPA is a non-profit organization that was started by Pilatus owners, in 1996, to increase communication and synergy among PC-12 owners from all over the world. The organization is now 250 members strong and continues to expand as the PC-12 continues to be the top selling turbine-powered aircraft.

Recognized by Pilatus as an award-winning Pilatus Support Center, KCAC is no stranger to the Swiss-built Pilatus PC-12. Since 2000, they have been an authorized Pilatus PC-12 Sales and Service Center for the Midwest region, and they are ranked among the nation's best centers.

KCAC has been a worldwide provider of general aviation services, including aircraft sales, maintenance, charter, parts and flight training since 1966. Based in the heart of the Kansas City business area, KCAC is affiliated with some of the most important business aviation manufacturers, including Piper and Pilatus. KCAC is a privately held company and employs over 75 people.
